

still dark
she skis the streets
before plows come around

www.origamipoems.com
origamipoems@gmail.com

Every Origami micro-chapbook may be printed from the website.

Cover: scene changes
by Jan Keough 2016

Origami Poetry Project™

harmless poses
Jeff Ingram © 2016

•
Recycle this microchap
with a friend.

harmless poses paper skeletons dangle from branches

oak's pulse
he seeks
through a stethoscope

not thinking
touching larkspur
with her lips

open tent flap
invites dawn
inside

out back
a toad and I greet
each other, the rain

first road trip
wearing socks she wore yesterday inside-out

geese claim the lot's last open parking spot fish he chooses to speak then listen to crayfish backpedal divine the current's music before a pond

stocked with koi
the heron genuflects